Nearly everyone can agree with the goals of preserving the historic and aesthetic features of Euclid Avenue, but how to go about it touched off some debate Thursday night at the Upland Planning Commission.

The planning commission held its initial review of the Euclid Avenue study, which was presented in an extensive series of revisions to the city code setting up a scenic corridor zone, general plan amendment and zone change.

Commissioners recommended eventual approval for parts of the general plan amendment and zone change, but took no final action on any of the proposals Thursday night.

The text amendment, general plan amendment and zone change are divided into smaller parts that establish special standards on future land use and addressing 10 areas along Euclid in the general plan amendment and zone change.

Commissioners adjourned the meeting 1:45 this morning and scheduled a work shop session for next Thursday and a special meeting June 7 for final commission recommendations to the city council.

Euclid Avenue has been under a council-imposed moratorium on accepting most applications for new development — from the San Bernardino Freeway north to Eugene Court — since Oct. 16 while study took place.

The moratorium is scheduled to end Tuesday and the council is not scheduled to review the study's proposals until July 2.

However, City Attorney Donald Maroney and Planning Director Bill Young indicated Thursday that the one-month between the end of the moratorium and possible council action should not pose problems over developments submitted during that time.

Young noted both the city and county general plans designate Euclid as one of four scenic routes through Upland.

He said records indicating concern for retaining the aesthetic, historic and cultural values of Euclid date back to 1935.

Euclid Avenue in Upland and Ontario has been found eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places.

The city established Euclid as its top priority in the 1974 scenic route element of its general plan. Young explained that the scenic corridor zone is aimed at preserving Euclid's values.

Young referred to the scenic corridor as an "overlay zone" that while not actually changing zoning for use of particular properties would set up special standards on future use.

These standards are detailed in the text amendment and set up proposed restrictions on such things as minimum lot widths and depths, sound attenuation and building setbacks.

Certain businesses — including adult-only businesses, animal hospitals or kennels, auto repair shops, lodges, lodges and drive-through restaurants — would be prohibited.

Many of the suggested standards are geared to helping Euclid retain its predominantly residential character in Upland, restricting conversion of older homes to commercial uses.

Several property owners told the planning commission Thursday that permitting some conversions is the best way to preserve the older structures giving Euclid much of its flavor.

Mary Ellingwood — wife of Ontario Mayor Robert Ellingwood and owner of a Euclid property in Upland — said, "I feel property along Euclid, most of them, is no longer suited for residential usage."

"It's very important to society to maintain our historical culture and save it for the future. This is not going to be possible if we have this type of zoning (the scenic corridor)."

Maintaining some of the properties as single-family homes is not economically feasible, she said, also pointing out traffic and other problems.

Young said homeowners currently risk being "squeezed out" of Euclid by spot conversion and added that the scenic corridor could help clear the way for state grants to aid homeowners in repairing their houses.

He referred to a "domino effect" that happens once commercial conversions are permitted.

Upland trustees unveil budget of $10 million

The Upland school board has unveiled a $10.08 million preliminary budget, an overall increase of 4.6 percent, for the coming fiscal year.

Tuesday's workshop session served as an introduction to the budget, which Superintendent George Renworth said would not come up for final adoption until August or perhaps September.

With school financing bills still pending in Sacramento, Renworth noted the preliminary budget forecasts a 7 percent growth in state funding pegged to the district's average daily attendance (ADA).

That increase would bring the Upland district's base revenue limit per ADA to $1,328 during the fiscal year beginning July 1 compared to $1,241 this year.

Renworth noted the district now anticipates a slight decline in enrollment, dropping ADA by 21 next year. Current district enrollment is 5,931.

Trustees and administrators briefly reviewed each page of the 26-page document.

The preliminary budget reflects spending some $114,000 greater than total income for 1979-80, which would reduce the ending balance for the fiscal year to $603,072. The budget totals $10,076,634.

This year's adopted budget came to $9,432,840, but actual estimates on revenue and income have pushed that figure to $9,632,510.

The budget so far includes no cost-of-living salary increases for district employees. The Upland Teachers Association recently presented the board with an initial contract proposal seeking a 12.5 percent salary increase for 1979-80.

Renworth said higher than expected federal and local income, lower expenditures and staff positions budgeted but not filled combined to give the district a beginning balance more than twice the figure projected earlier this year.

That beginning balance is now pegged at $717,147.

Some of the other key features of the budget are:

- Reduction of four teaching positions, through teachers leaving the district, at a savings in salaries of $72,000. The district would start the year with seven fewer teachers but add three.

- Busing to remain at current guidelines, generally 1½ miles for elementary students and 2½ miles for junior high school students.

Renworth noted the district has not realized the savings in bus service it had expected, because state reimbursement for transportation is "almost based on how inefficient you are."

He pointed out that when the district pared busing by about half as a cost-cutting move under Proposition 13, the demand rose for crossing guards. Six crossing guards are budgeted and the city of Upland has suggested a 50-50 split with the district of that cost.

Renworth said the district has not agreed to the financing arrangement yet, and he added that increased fuel costs might play a role if the trustees consider increasing bus service.

- Restoration of positions for part-time instructional aides in the regular education program to pre-Proposition 13 levels. Cost was estimated at $65,000.

- Addition of nine part-time library aides, noon-time supervision aides, a psychologist and a nurse.

- Painting the exterior of Upland Junior High School. Cost was estimated at $50,000.

- Phaseout of the district's participation in the U.S. Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program. Two of the district's three CETA employees would be shifted to the district payroll.

Renworth said that of the $5,789,456 overall the district expects to receive from the state, the fate of some $370,000 in block grant funds is "speculative."

The budget reflects a shift of special education funds to be funneled through the county under the new West End Master Plan.

The district forecasts receiving $2,330,000 in secured and unsecured property tax as its allocation under Proposition 13. Total local income is projected at $2,766,000; federal income totals $418,031.

World traveler sees China

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

A world traveler, Eleanor Smith of Upland, had one country still to see — China.

When the country was opened to tourists, Ms. Smith wanted to go. She learned Lindblad Tours out of New York City was putting together a tour.

"I called and asked if they had room for a travel agent and they did," Ms. Smith said. She has been working at Upland Travel for over a year, but was quick to report she paid her own way on the China jaunt.

She had one month to get ready — "Visas take time," Ms. Smith said, and she didn't receive hers until a few hours before she flew to Hong Kong to join the other 23 travelers from all over the United States. Ms. Smith said she is using her third passport.

In Hong Kong, Ms. Smith said they were joined by their guide, June Slevin of London. "She was the same guide I had two years ago when we went 1,000 miles up the Nile," Ms. Smith said. In Whampoa, a part of Canton, they were met by two Chinese men, one who spoke English and one who didn't. They would go with the group on the whole trip.

Once in China proper, the travelers had their first cup of tea — "The first of many cups of tea which you drank whether you wanted it or not," she said.

The itinerary for the trip had been discussed, but Ms. Smith said they never knew where they were going until they arrived in China.

Once embarked on their trip, they went to major cities and the highlight was to see Paotow in Inner Mongolia. Ms. Smith said, "They (the Chinese) never had seen anyone like us before."

In about every place the tourists went, the Chinese "jammed around us," she said, but they did not touch them. "They weren't hateful, but it did make it hard to shop." In the stores, Ms. Smith observed that the Chinese are not ready for tourists as, "They don't have any tourist junk, but do have the beautiful handwork items the Chinese make."

On this trip, the food became tedious and Ms. Smith felt, "lacking in protein." They used chopsticks exclusively. She said the group became hungry for something American to eat so in one place, they were served eggs for breakfast.

"The Chinese know 100 ways to murder an egg," she said.

The tourists did not drink the water, and Ms. Smith said, "I never drank so much beer in my life." She always carried a water purifying tablet so she could take any pills and use the water for brushing her teeth. "I've never had a problem with water by using Halazone pills. I carry a pint plastic bottle and drop the pill into the water — in 15 minutes I have pure water," she said.

Many of the group did come down with upper respiratory infections, she said. "They couldn't do enough for us," she said. She was examined by a doctor and given pills which she presumed were herbs. "I finally took the pills," she said, "and I did get better, so they must have helped."

On the trip, the group went to factories, schools and industrial plants (where most work is done manually). Ms. Smith said one had to be in good physical condition as they walked miles and climbed long flights of stairs.

They toured a hospital and found the conditions primitive and far below American standards, and sanitation conditions deplorable in practically every place they visited.

The group flew on jet and prop planes. When it came time for meals, the planes landed, the travelers were fed, then they boarded the planes to continue the flights.

The white liquor served by the Chinese she said would "take the hair off the top of your head." She reported the Chinese make fine wines. The food, for the most part, was filled with garlic, and, "We stunk like pole cats," she said. But, she said, in many places, the food was delicious, consisting mainly of vegetables.

The tourists went to a movie called, "The Cowboy and the Weaver," a fantasy. Ms. Smith explained the boy in the movie kept a cow and that's why he was called a "cowboy." She described the movie as, "beautiful."

Travel for the average Chinese citizen is by bicycle, walking or in some places, by bus. There are no elevators in buildings. Everyone works in China, Ms. Smith said, and she saw few elderly people. "They were probably taking care of the children," she said. Couples are only supposed to have two children.

The Upland woman said most of the group came home sick, and she's not sure whether she wants to go back to China. If she did, it would be to places not seen on this trip.

"By the way," Ms. Smith said, "the trip was my honeymoon — Eldon Langford and I were married on Jan. 27 and left on the trip on Feb. 4 — if we can survive that, we can survive anything."

This is a colorful rubbing which Eleanor Smith of Upland brought home from her trip to China. She said China isn't ready for tourists and the stores, called Friendship Stores, do not have any "tourist junk." On the trip, the party of 24 tourists visited the cities of Hong Kong, Canton, Shanghai, Lanchow, Peking and Paotow in Inner Mongolia. Ms. Smith wanted to see China because, in her world travels, it was the only country she had not visited. (Staff photo by Marge Gross)

At seminar, tour at high school

Upland student leaders honored

Twenty elementary school students and junior high school representatives were honored recently at the Upland High School annual Leadership Seminar and Tour.

The students, chosen from their respective classes for their leadership potential, were addressed by Principal Jan Wright, Pep Commissioner Kelly Shobe and Prom Chairman Monica Hunter. The three discussed leadership qualities and described available opportunities for developing high school leadership potential.

Terry Johnson, Pioneer Junior High spring semester student body president, and Debbie Keel, vice president, outlined the leadership options available at the junior-high-school level.

Participating in the tour were Laurel DeVeiga and Tom Cline, Cabrillo Elementary School; Julie Abbott and Larry Davidow, Sierra Vista Elementary; Tiffany Profia and Mike Ulloa, Baldy View Elementary; Paul Wilson and Ann Linka, Citrus Elementary; Jennifer Arjo and Kim Welborn, Sycamore Elementary; Susan Andersen and Chris Koslosky, Magnolia Elementary; Kim Bauer and Jason Gorman, Valencia Elementary; Tracie Vargus and Tracey Slaughter, Foothill Knolls

Elementary, and Mark Shafia and Kelly Greene, Mt. Baldy School. Pioneer Junior High eighth-grade students toured the campus during the seminar.

Dr. Helen Kennedy, former chairman of the audiology department at Cal State L.A., holds a sound level meter to measure the voice level of Dr. Ralph Lightbody, left, pastor of Ontario First Baptist Church, and Roger Sagouspe, chairman of the Hearing Aid Bank. The three are planning a hearing workshop for clergy scheduled at First Baptist Church, from 9 a.m. until noon today. The Hearing Aid Bank is cosponsored by the Pomona Valley Council of Churches and Ontario First Baptist Church. (Staff photo)

Anniversary tea marks foundings

The founding of Epsilon Sigma Alpha and the 30th anniversary of Kappa Sigma Chapter were celebrated with a 50th anniversary tea held recently at the Upland home of Mrs. Danial Webster.

ESA has grown from a single chapter of the National Reading Society to an international organization. Kappa Sigma chapter's charter was signed Jan. 17, 1949, with seven members receiving jewel pins in June, 1950. The first president was Ethel Jean Mosher. Of the remaining six members, Joan Barow Patrick and Betty Webster are still active.

Kappa Sigma chapter contributes volunteer hours of work at the American Cancer Society's Treasure Chest gift shop in Ontario and at Santa Claus Inc. Members arrange for Christmas baskets for needy families and have educational enrichment programs.

Help lighten the electric load.

If you do the heavy housework in the morning, here's what you'll be doing. The baking. The dishwashing. The laundry. And the vacuuming.

But you'll be doing something else, too. Something that's very important. By giving your electric appliances the afternoon off, you'll be helping to lighten the load from noon to 6 p.m. That's when homes, stores, offices and factories turn on air conditioners to beat the afternoon heat.

Give your appliances the afternoon off. Then Edison can put off building expensive new power plants. And you'll help keep your electric bills down.

Ancient rock given to Chaffey College

The first contribution to the Chaffey College Museum - Gallery's sculpture garden was unveiled Tuesday as one of the highlights of Alumni Week on campus.

The "circle rock," weighing 19,800 pounds, is decorated with Indian pictography possibly 1,000 years old. This specimen was donated by Dr. Bernice McAllister, professor of anthropology, her husband James and her son Jack. It was transported more than 600 miles from Fish Creek Ranch in Utah. This type of boulder is not native to that area, but is reputed by geologists to have been thrown up by volcanic action approximately 20 million years ago, and later, during a glacial period, to have been carried downstream from Boulder Mountain by ice packs or rushing waters.

The massive object posed a serious transportation problem for Museum - Gallery Director Skip Pahl and the Friends of the Museum - Gallery. A Diesel truck tow rig was provided by James Will, vice president of operations at Kaiser Steel in Fontana.

Some authorities believe that the rock drawings can be interpreted as only "art" or "doodles" or ritual magic of the Fremont Indians, to be understood only by the culture and the locale of the rock's origin. On the other hand, scholars like Le Mans Martinequ interpret them as a more universal pictographic writing and communication system including the depiction of warnings, locations and important events.

Since the original setting of the rock near the junction of Sulphur Creek and Fremont River is integral with the rock's message, Jack McAllister, artist and illustrator, will map the rock's original setting and make copies of the signs and designs to be used for study and interpretive purposes by scholars.

Chaffey plans aptitude tests

A free aptitude test has been scheduled at Chaffey Community College on June 2, 8 a.m. to noon in Forum Building Room 7. This four-hour test is designed to help people assess their strengths or weaknesses in nine areas of aptitudes and to provide some help in career decision-making.

After the tests have been scored, counselors will be available, by appointment, to interpret the results and to relate this information to possible career choices or courses of study.

People who wish to explore possible career options may use the resources of the Career Center which contains a large library of information pertaining to occupational fields and career areas.

Sign-ups are now being taken in the Career Center for the aptitude test, or arrangements may be made by calling 987-1737, 822-4484 or 735-0242 ext. 386. The public is invited to attend.

Private tuition-based program

Claremont summer school ok'd

Claremont school board members voted 4-1 Monday night to approve a private tuition-based summer school program.

The program will be run by the University of La Verne. Tuition charges will range from $35 to $110 per student.

The district will also operate a smaller free public remedial education summer school for 300 students. To qualify, students must be below grade level in their coursework.

Trustees said a lack of funds due to Proposition 13 left the district unable to provide a free summer school program for the majority of students.

There were a total of five bidders for this year's private summer school contract.

The University of La Verne was selected due to its program, which will offer a full summer school program to those who can afford it and a limited number who cannot afford it.

Five percent of the students going to the university-run summer school will receive tuition-free or financial aid scholarships, officials reported. Only four percent of Claremont students are from families on welfare, officials said.

Condit and Mountain View elementary schools have been suggested as the possible sites for the elementary and junior high school summer programs.

Claremont High School will be the location of the high school program.

School board President Mary Ellen Kilsby voted to oppose the privately-operated summer school concept.

saying it might set a dangerous precedent in education.

She characterized her opposition as "symbolic", saying she was only voting against the concept.

She had earlier voted to allow private summer school on Claremont campuses.

She said that in ensuing weeks she had "realized what we were doing" and concluded that private tuition-based summer school could result in "the beginning of a very scary spectre."

The 'music man'

Claremont director leads chorale, church choir

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Louis Ronfeldt could well be called the "music man of the Pomona Valley."

The Claremont man has been directing secular and church music in the area since he started his first band at Emerson Junior High School in Pomona in 1934.

In 1970, the Louis Ronfeldt Chorale was organized and Ronfeldt said, "Doc Blanchard and I were a team." The late organist, William Blanchard, played the piano and organ for the chorale.

The 24 to 32 singers come from Upland, Whittier, Pasadena, Ontario, Pomona, Claremont and Chino.

"All members have high caliber voices including two soprano Metropolitan Opera finalists," Ronfeldt said.

To try out for the group, when vacancies exist, singers are asked to sing a solo and sight read a piece with three other chorale members. This, Ronfeldt said, is done after the aspiring singer has rehearsed with the group for two rehearsals.

"If a singer realizes he or she just isn't of the same caliber of the other singers, he won't show up for the next rehearsal — they eliminate themselves," Ronfeldt said.

The conductor is proud that in the past two years, he has only taken in three new singers. "They just stay," he said. "They are tremendously loyal and dedicated."

Ronfeldt said his chorale gives about five to eight concerts a year in various places such as Garrison Theater, Claremont, Redlands Bowl and Gardiner Spring Auditorium in Ontario. The final concert of the year is given in May for the residents of Pilgrim Place in Claremont.

The non-profit singing group often does benefits and Ronfeldt said two of these were for the Campfire Girls and sickle cell anemia.

None of the Louis Ronfeldt Chorale singers are paid, but the accompanist, Daniel Bridston of Cal Poly Pomona, is compensated for his work. Other accompanists who work with the group are Kathreen Prout, professor of piano at Cal Poly Pomona and Larry Wong of the Cerritos College music department.

Every 18 months, Ronfeldt said the chorale sponsors a fund drive, and he said, Dr. Francis Ellis over the years has been a major supporting contributor. About $700 is raised. The funds are used for sheet music, for music students' scholarships and to cover other expenses.

The singers' repertoire has a wide range according to Ronfeldt. This year's major effort was doing "King David" by Honegger at Temple Beth Israel in Pomona. The work will be repeated again on May 27 at 4 p.m. in the Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational.

Ronfeldt has been choir director at the Claremont church for 28 years. Before the Louis Ronfeldt Chorale was organized, the choir of that Congregational Church, consisting of 70 voices, was called the Oratorio Singers.

The singers did all the masterpiece works for voices during the six years of the choir's existence. "The crowning achievement of the singers was to give Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Claremont Symphony Orchestra," Ronfeldt said with pride. "We had a tremendous following and were equal to any chorale group in Southern California."

Ronfeldt was with the music department of Mt. San Antonio College for 29 years, and before retiring in 1975 was acting department head for five years. After teaching at Emerson Junior High and Chino High, he was at Fremont Junior High School, Pomona, for seven years.

In 1938, Ronfeldt, a graduate of Pomona College, took a year's leave of absence to study at the School of Sacred Music in New York. "This was the most exciting collegiate year I ever had — I learned the humanists musical relationship to the arts." He then spent three years at Bonita High School in La Verne.

Ronfeldt also started the Pomona Valley Junior Symphony for youths and directed the 70 young musicians.

For the past two years, he has been president of the Community Concert Association. Ronfeldt considers the Community Concerts, staged in Ontario, as "an important attraction for the West End."

"The talent brought here for such low prices to the subscribers is equal to any at Bridges Auditorium or in Los Angeles," he said.

Ronfeldt also is directing the University Men's Glee Club which has 24 members, all retired professors. The oldest singer, Ronfeldt said, is Glenn Rowls, 94. "We sing everything, especially old college songs."

The chorale director is spending some time writing the music for short anthems and responses. When asked if he plans to have his works published, he said, "I'm not pressing for publication — having them heard (in the Claremont Church of Christ, Congregational) is reward enough."

Center helps people to pick interesting careers

Do you prefer work activities that deal with things and objects, activities involving direct personal contact, or activities involving creative thinking?

Up until now, if you were looking for a job, you had to know the name of the kind of job you were looking for before you could get any information about it. Not any more. At Chaffey College's career center, students and community members can relate their preferences in work activities and work situations, and key sort through 66 worker trait groups to find which careers fit those work preferences.

Under a grant from the California Fund for Innovation in Education, Myrna Elliott, career counselor, has purchased materials from the Appalachia Educational Laboratories Career Information System. There are 66 cards, each which represents a cluster of jobs with the same traits. Individuals seeking information about jobs can key sort them by hand to pull out cards which represent careers involving work situations like: performing routine duties which change frequently, performing routine tasks, planning and directing an entire activity, influencing people's opinions, attitudes and judgments.

After the individual has sorted the cards for work situations which are related to personality traits, and work activities (which are related to interests), such as activities involving business contact, activities resulting in recognition from others, activities involving direct personal contact to help others, there are also categories of reasoning level, preparation or degree needed and physical demands.

"I had a man confined to a wheelchair who came in to see me the other day. He thought there were no jobs out there for him. But I key sorted the cards for 'sedentary activity' and came up with many worker trait groups that do not involve physical activity," Elliott explained.

Elliott has also developed workshops for students which will introduce them to this new system. The two-hour, free workshop is given every week, alternating from 1-3 p.m. on Wednesdays one week to 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Tuesday the next week. She will also be conducting a workshop for some Alta Loma High School students, utilizing this material in order to tell them which work trait groups they appear to have a preference for and which college courses are available in those areas.

"This is a way for people to find work that suits their needs," she said. For more information about this career guidance system, call 987-1737, 822-4484 or 735-0242 ext. 386 or 387.

Photographs trace history

By ILA WALES
Staff Writer

A photographic exhibit tracing the history of the first ladies of the United States is being displayed at Cal Poly Pomona library gallery through June 4.

The exhibit, emphasizing the evolving roles of the women who have served as official White House hostesses, attempt to point out the position of the American woman in society and how she has progressed over the years.

Included in the exhibit are

Angelica Van Buren, who often wore a velvet dress and ostrich plumes in her hair and sat on an improvised throne while entertaining guests; Louisa Catherine Johnson Adams, who nurtured silkworms in the presidential mansion; and Lou Henry Hoover, who served as national president of the Girl Scouts during her tenure as first lady.

The exhibit was prepared by Louise Durbin and is part of the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service.

Works by Harrison McIntosh are being displayed at Chaffey College's Museum-Gallery, 5885 Haven Ave., Rancho Cucamonga.

Watercolors by Doris Cook are on exhibit at the Redlands Art Association, 12 E. Vine St., Redlands. Gallery hours are from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, except Sundays, when the gallery is closed.

A five-day art seminar taught by John Collier is scheduled June 4-8 at the Fontana Art Association, 8536 Sierra Ave., Fontana. The seminar will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and is open to association members only.

Fifteen works by 10 sculptors are being exhibited on the grounds surrounding the Fine Arts Building at Cal State, San Bernardino, 5500 State College Parkway, San Bernardino, through June.

'Godspell' booked for Starlite Series

The last program of this season's Montclair Starlite Series, a concert and entertainment series sponsored by the city of Montclair's Department of Human Services will be Valley Community Theater's production of the musical "Godspell."

The admission free performance will take place Thursday, June 7, at 8:15 p.m. in the high school auditorium, 4725 Benito St., Montclair.

The musical by Stephen Schwartz is based upon the gospel according to St. Matthew. It received its first performance in 1971 at the Cherry Lane Theater in New York City.

Robert Cook plays the role of Jesus and Frank Kohel doubles as John the Baptist and Judas. A large ensemble of singers and dancers including Daryl Roberts, Laura Lilley, Kathy Gasco and Gene Kohel complete the cast.

Ballet dancers may audition for two local dance companies

The Concert Dance Theater is looking for talented men and women ballet dancers who would like to perform with the senior and junior companies during the 1979-80 season.

Auditions for those who have strong ballet techniques and some training in jazz or modern dance will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 3 in the Coop Ballroom at Pomona College, Sixth and College, Claremont.

Bob and Carol Hanlin, directors of the Goleta Ballet and former soloists with the American Ballet Theater, will assist Jo Ann Warner, Concert Dance Theater artistic director, with the judging.

Dancers may arrive at the Coop at 1 p.m. to register and warm up before the actual auditions begin. Women dancers should be prepared for pointe work.

Ms. Warner, who studied with master teachers Camryn and Stone and Leon Fokine and had a distinguished career as a dancer and choreographer before opening a Pomona dance studio, formed the Concert Dance Theater in 1974 as a performing vehicle for area dancers.

The Concert Dance Theater annually presents a spring, fall and Christmas concert. Company members also perform as guest artists for various civic and charitable organizations in the area and at the Pacific Regional Ballet Association Festival. They will travel to Sacramento in May, 1980 for that festival.

More than 50 national training scholarships have been awarded to company members, past and present, from such distinguished companies as the American Ballet Theater, Harkness Ballet, Joffrey, Los Angeles, Royal Winnipeg, San Francisco, the School of American Ballet and the Melissa Hayden School.

Many former company performers are now appearing with such groups as the Disney Touring Company, the New York City Ballet, the San Antonio Ballet and in Las Vegas productions.

Two-act play

'The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail' next college production

Henry David Thoreau, the man who "marched to the beat of a different drummer," is the central figure in the next Chaffey College Theatre Arts Department production. "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, will be presented in the College Theater June 1, 2, 8, and 9 at 8:30 p.m.

The two-act play depicts the life and time of Thoreau, a New England Yankee, a sharp critic of society, and a poetic nature writer whose Walden (written in 1854) is one of the American classics. The play takes place in a jail cell during one night when Thoreau was imprisoned for refusing to pay a tax that he alleged would be applied to support slavery.

Through a series of flashbacks, Thoreau revisits the people and places which are important to him. People like Ralph Waldo Emerson, Mrs. Emerson, and Thoreau's mother and brother John all help to explain and influence the man who was Henry David Thoreau. The play helps modern audiences understand the man and his philosophy — a man who believed in personal freedom and solitude. He was a man who delighted in life and who transmitted this delight to others.

The title role in Chaffey's production will be played by Scott Herby, Alta Loma, who recently appeared as Hortensio in the Chaffey production of "The Taming of the Shrew." Playing the role of Thoreau's close friend and benefactor, Ralph Waldo Emerson, is Matthew W. Sullivan, Upland. Matthew last appeared as Petruchio in "The Taming of the Shrew."

Other members of the cast include Mary Young, Alta Loma, as Lydian; Alane Hegney, Chino, as Thoreau's mother; Richard Reinschmidt, Fontana, as Thoreau's brother John; Bruce W. Jones, Upland, as Bailey; Duke March, Ontario, as Deacon Hall; Debbie Lindsay Whitman, Pomona, as Ellen; John Edward Lynd, Los Serranos, as Sam Staples; John Sheftal as Edward; Marvin A. Saleem, Ontario, as Williams; and Paul Armstrong, Chino, as the farmer.

Portraying various townspeople and soldiers are Judi Amidon, Dana Edwards, Becky Hernandez, Melissa Latimer, Miriam Perez, Anne Sullivan, Laura Underwood, Steven Welles, Robert Godding, Bart Miller, and Chris Tallon.

"The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail" is directed by Catherine John-

Weight control program

"Weight Control: Self-Management Techniques in Diet and Exercise," a one-day program for the general public based on the latest scientific research in the area of diet and exercise, will meet Saturday, June 23, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., in 4000A Math Sciences Building on the UCLA campus.

Instructed by exercise physiologist Susan Meyerott, the program will teach participants individualized plans on how to start and maintain a program that encourages lifelong weight control. Topics will cover the ideal exercise and diet plan and how to control eating without self-denial through behavior modifications. A self-management workbook is included.

New fund sources keep loans going

By JAMES M. WOODARD

Copley News Service
I had a strange dream the other night. And it made me think that perhaps I've permitted my involvement with real estate to go a bit too far.

It seems I wanted to buy a home. After months of searching for the right property, I found the perfect home. It met all the criteria we had in mind for the ideal family home.

I submitted an offer to buy the property. It was accepted and I was happily on my way to housing bliss for evermore, I thought!

The next day, I confidently walked into a major savings and loan association and asked the chief loan officer for the best possible terms on a loan to finance my new dream home.

His expression was serious. As he bit off his words of response, his attitude was rather cold and callous. He resembled a battle-weary soldier in desperate need of rest to soothe his battered nerves.

"We can't loan you any money," he said. "We have no funds."

"You don't seem to understand," I explained. "I have already purchased a home. All I need now is a simple loan. And my qualifications are more than adequate."

"We can't make any loan because we have no money," he retorted like a broken record.

"Listen," I snapped back. "Forget the bit about best possible terms. I'll pay any interest rate. Double your laundry list of loan fees. Shorten the amortization term. You name it and I'll take it."

His once cool attitude heated up and began to boil. "We have no money to loan. No lending institution does. Get lost!"

I didn't get lost. I just woke up, in a cold sweat.

Could such a thing ever happen in a real life situation? Could our lending institutions run out of money for home loans?

It's very unlikely. In fact, there are new factors in the current market that point to an ample supply of home loan money for a long time to come. Expensive, but ample.

For example, savings and loan associations were recently authorized to offer a new type of "money market certificates" that is attracting and holding loanable funds that might have slipped out of their hands a year ago.

New sources of funds are flowing into home mortgage loan coffers. Pension funds and insurance companies are greatly increasing their investments in this area.

New and creative innovations are being used in some cities and counties throughout the country to generate and maintain a reservoir of loanable funds for individuals and families who want to buy and finance a home.

The sale of tax-free housing bonds is becoming a major source of funds in an increasing number of communities.

More than $720 million worth of these bonds were sold in the brief nine-month experience of bond sales, according to the Congressional Budget Office. And the idea is spreading rapidly.

It all started last summer in Chicago and Minneapolis. The Treasury Department estimates that at least $2.5 billion in new housing bonds will be sold this year.

Basically, there are two factors that almost assure a constant supply of funds available for home mortgage loans.

First, there is tremendous political pressure to create techniques and programs that will provide opportunities for families to finance the purchase of a home.

Second, a home mortgage loan is the most secure of all investment forms. Most families consider the payment on their home mortgage loan as their "top priority" expenditure. Even though other bills may be neglected, those mortgage payment checks are usually sent on their way.

Q. We recently leased a unit in a new office building. The day after moving in, we discovered one entire wall had no electric outlets, which is in violation of the local building code. The owner of the building adamantly refuses to install the needed and legal outlets. What can be done about it?

A. If such a goof is in violation of your local code and somehow missed the building inspector's eye, you could probably force the owner to install the outlets. Most owners would quickly make the installation when requested by a new tenant, to satisfy his responsibilities and maintain positive relations with tenants.

However, if you are dealing with the type of person who "adamantly refuses," it's doubtful that legal action is the most practical way to handle the situation. The cost of installation is usually small.

Have the job done yourself and chalk it off to education. The lesson is to observe and discuss such things before you sign the lease — not after.

Copley News Service
There's good news and bad news on the 1979 home financing front.

The bad news affects home sellers and buyers in the 15 states where usury interest rate ceilings are fixed at 10 percent or less.

In these states, it's now against the law for a lender to charge the currently prevailing interest rate for home mortgage loans. This will tend to cut off the flow of available loan funds in those states.

The good news is that some of these funds, thwarted in the low usury limit rate, will be diverted to other states where that problem doesn't exist. Thus, the unhappiness experienced in some states will produce joy in others.

The problem could be very serious in the 15 states — particularly for home buyers, sellers and builders.

There is expected to be a substantial decrease in the number of new home "construction starts" this year in the United States compared with the two million housing starts last year.

The biggest decrease will be experienced in those 15 low usury limit states. In those states, half of the decrease will be directly attributable to the usury limit, it is being predicted by housing industry leaders.

Nationally, about 20 percent of this year's decrease in home construction activity will result from low usury limits.

Unless the laws are changed quickly, it will prevent thousands of families from acquiring a home of their own. And it will be the younger families who suffer most.

Where the flow of mortgage money is cut short, the qualification requirements will tighten for the limited funds that are still available. This will tend to squeeze out young families who have not yet reached their maximum income potential.

To make matters worse, the majority of markets affected by low usury ceiling laws are in "sunbelt" states, where many families from the north and east hope and plan to establish a new home this year. After the infamous winter of 1979, the migration to the sun belt is expected to be stronger than ever.

In fact, in all but four of the 15 states the rate of population growth exceeds the national average by a substantial amount.

The situation could change in some of the problem states. Home buyers, sellers, builders and realtors are hoping consumer-minded legislators will take corrective action — and take it quickly.

The 15 low usury limit states are Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Vermont.

Q. What age group of home buyers is expected to increase most rapidly during the 1980s.

A. Young families, headed by people in their 30s and early 40s, will increase most rapidly, according to a study recently concluded by a Texas A and M demographer.

It was also determined that middle-age people will decline in numbers. The second most rapidly increasing group will be elderly people.

Without TV

Families find ties to tube deeper than they thought

By JAMES ABRAMS
Kyodo-Copley
News Service

TOKYO — Is modern man capable of surviving without the addictive images of television dancing before his eyes every day? Are the mental shackles of soap operas and situation comedies unbreakable?

These are the questions posed to 42 families in the Japanese port city of Kobe who participated in a municipal agency program to probe the unexplored world of the television-less home.

For one month these households, ranging in makeup from newlyweds in their 20s to retirees living with their children and grandchildren, unplugged their TV sets to see how life without TV would affect their lives.

The withdrawal syndromes were apparently not easy to overcome. The participants, who wrote reports of their travails during the month, told of hiding their sets in garden sheds, or wrapping the plug in insulating tape to remove the temptation to catch their favorite show.

Four families finally succumbed to the video lure and dropped out of the program. One family was unable to last a single day without the set on.

The results of those who finished the program intact were quite varied. Some spoke of a sense of enlightenment and joyous escape from the bondage of TV. Others told tales of how the absence of TV nearly caused a group mental breakdown in their families.

On the plus side, people related with enthusiasm how a feeling of tranquility had returned to their homes, that they were sleeping and rising earlier, reading more, and in a generally healthier frame of mind.

One mother said that she and her husband now have lively conversations with their kids, a rarity when the TV set was their primary nightly companion. Others said that their children, who never used to lift a finger in the house, were now making their beds and helping with the dishes.

They reported that the kids were playing outdoors more and eating better. One mother said that with the TV off her children ate all their fish, even picking the meat off the bones like a cat.

Four of the families were so happy with their new no-TV lives that they have decided to keep the set unplugged indefinitely.

However, many also found that TV is a mental pacifier that they cannot live without. Some wives said that they became irritable and tense, and were unable to keep track of the time without the set on. Children complained that they felt isolated at school because they could not discuss TV programs with their friends and did not know the dance steps of a popular singing duo's latest song. Fights between siblings increased.

The hardest hit in many cases were the fathers. Men said that TV relieved their stress after a hard day at the office, and that they were unable to sleep well at night after being deprived of their evening programs. Some started drinking heavily, staying out late at Mah-Jongg parlors, or cheating by watching the Japan Series, the pro baseball championship, at the local bar.

One fidgeting man, when asked by his wife whether he would rather watch TV or talk to his family, answered forthrightly that TV was more interesting. That family quickly dropped out of the program. Masashi Kawaike, head of the Kobe City Juvenile Affairs Office, which sponsored the program, said that their aim was not to start an anti-TV movement, but to make people more aware of how TV has come to dominate their lives.

He said that the program was a success because people did learn how different, both in a positive and negative sense, their lives can be without TV. Many plugged their sets back in at the end of the month with a new resolve to be more selective in their viewing and a determination not to be the slaves of the magic box.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. (NHK) reported recently that the average Japanese household has the set on three hours 37 minutes on weekdays and four hours 21 minutes on Sunday.

As the people of Kobe learned, the ties to the tube run deeper than one thinks.

Good guide is best way to find game

By HARLON BARTLETT
Copley News Service

Hunting or fishing in unfamiliar territory can sometimes be a difficult, barren proposition.

If you've done much traveling, you know the problem.

The best looking areas aren't always the ones that hold the most deer. Ducks and geese change their flight patterns frequently, and it usually takes "local knowledge" to untangle where they will be and when.

Streams seemingly reeking of trout turn up empty, or gurgle tantalizingly behind "no trespassing" signs.

That's why there is such a thing as a guide.

A good guide can, most days, put you where the fish and game are; what you do with it after that depends on your talent.

However, one of the toughest hunts of all can be tracking down a guide worth his price and your time.

My experience has been that, while there are some hardworking, knowledgeable, conscientious guides in the business, there too are some real donkeys, guys who can differentiate between a catfish and a bobcat only at close range.

Steering clear of the incompetents in the trade requires some effort on the outdoorsman's part.

Word-of-mouth advertising is the best, of course, but it's not always available. And even it can be faulty if you're not well acquainted with the person doing the mouthing.

A guide who fills you in on some of the history of his area and identifies unusual flora along the way might please you to no end, but be strictly a pain in the neck to someone whose sole goal is meat in the freezer.

Some states, such as Alaska, insist guides have certain experience standards and must pass oral and written tests to qualify for the job.

In other states guides are self-proclaimed, with no state requirements to meet. In still others, prerequisites are flimsy.

The pretenders are guys who get a kick out of being called a guide, who have time on their hands with nothing better to do.

Avoiding them, regardless of what state they work in, takes time and caution.

A good guide, like game, must be stalked. Write letters to several where you intend to hunt or fish. Scrutinize the replies.

If some replies arrive scribbled on the blank side of a shell box covered with muddy dog tracks, it's a fairly safe bet the guide is disorganized in other ways, too.

Follow up with phone calls to those guides whose replies have the most appeal.

Stay away from guides who are paid a flat salary by a resort or lodge. Their incentive to produce is not nearly as great as the guy who is on his own.

Try to find clients who aren't on the guide's reference list. Impartial judgment is the best kind.

Above all, don't rush the selection process. If you are a good judge of people and do your homework well in advance, the odds are in your favor.

But even then it won't be an easy hunt.

My doctor pronounced me cured of cancer. My boss didn't.

My boss didn't understand that I was healthy again.

So I was let go. A lot of people are like my boss. They think that everyone dies of cancer. I thought so, too. Until the American Cancer Society, through one of its service and rehabilitation programs, helped me return to a normal life.

The ACS also has local Units that help Americans who've never had cancer understand it better.

Today, more and more, cancer is a curable disease. Ignorance about cancer is curable, too.
